

Marabou stork

Yellow billed stork

Okavango Delta Part Two

On the morning of day two, we went for a nature hike around the island we camped on. Near the end we came across this family of elephants.

Probably an immature African Fish Eagle, possibly an African Hawk Eagle

Okavango Delta Part Two

Warthog

Male red leshwe

Okavango Delta Part Two

Saddle billed stork

Male red leshwe

Tawny eagle

Black wildebeest (Gnu)

Spooked Zebras

Okavango Delta Part Two

Female saddle billed stork

African fish eagle

Male greater kudu

Male waterbuck

Okavango Delta Part Two

Male lion

Male lion drinking, female sitting

Okavango Delta Part Two

A small section of the immense destruction wreaked by the elephants. They have denuded and destroyed countless square miles of forest. The guides and local managers estimate that the elephant population is about 33% too large for the area to support.

Sunset on the Delta, day two. Note the two hippos sparring in the foreground. They are establishing the social hierarchy for this group.